Second, do a short exercise after each lesson so that you can (22) whether you truly understand the content. Third, keep a mistake notebook. Do not simply copy the correct answer; write down (23) your first thought was wrong. Review the notebook once a week. This turns mistakes into useful information (24) repeated failures. Finally, use timed papers only after you have built a basic knowledge system. At that stage, timing helps you improve both speed (25) accuracy. A good plan is not the one that looks busiest. It is the one you can continue, examine, and (26). If a weekly target is too difficult, divide it into smaller steps. When a task is completed, mark it clearly. This gives you a sense of progress and makes it (27) to continue. Remember that preparation is a long process. Missing one day is not a reason to give (28). 第三部分 阅读理解 (30分)

共10题，每题3分。根据短文选择最佳答案。

Passage One

A college study group tried a simple experiment. For four weeks, half of the students watched recorded lessons at any speed they liked. The other half watched the same lessons but paused every twenty minutes to write a three-sentence summary and answer two questions without notes. Both groups spent nearly the same amount of time. At the end, the second group remembered more key ideas and made fewer mistakes on new problems. The researchers explained that learning feels smooth when information is familiar, but familiarity is not the same as mastery. Trying to recall information forces the brain to rebuild it. This effort may feel slow, yet it produces stronger memory. The study group therefore changed its rule: every lesson must end with a closed-book check. Students could still replay difficult parts, but only after attempting to explain them first.

31. What was different about the second group?

A. They watched different lessons. B. They studied for more hours. C. They regularly recalled and tested themselves. D. They used faster playback.

32. What did the second group achieve?

A. Better memory and transfer. B. Shorter lessons. C. More familiar materials. D. Fewer study days.

33. According to the passage, familiarity ____.

A. always means mastery B. may create a false feeling of learning C. makes recall unnecessary D. is stronger than practice

34. Why can recall feel slow?

A. It requires active mental effort. B. It uses outdated materials. C. It reduces memory. D. It depends on group size.

35. Which title best fits the passage?

- A. The Fastest Video Player B. Why More Notes Are Always Better C. The Value of Closed-Book Recall D. How to Form a Large Study Group

Passage Two

Official exam notices are more than administrative documents. They define who may register, which subjects are tested, and when important steps must be completed. Yet many students depend on screenshots forwarded in group chats. A screenshot may be incomplete, old, or separated from its original context. A safer habit is to locate the notice on the examination authority's website and record three items: the publication date, the applicable group of candidates, and the action deadline. Students should also save the link rather than only the picture. If a school organizes part of the qualification process, such as a professional-course assessment, students need to check both the provincial notice and their college's academic-office message. Reliable information will not replace studying, but it protects the opportunity to sit the exam.

36. Why can forwarded screenshots be risky?

- A. They are always fake. B. They may lack date or context. C. They cannot show Chinese text. D. They are too large to save.

37. Which item should students record from an official notice?

- A. The writer's hobby. B. The website color. C. The action deadline. D. The number of pictures.

38. Why should students save the original link?

- A. To verify and revisit the full notice. B. To make the phone faster. C. To avoid all school messages. D. To replace registration.

39. If the college organizes an assessment, students should ____.

- A. check only group chats B. wait until the exam day C. follow both provincial and college notices D. ignore the provincial notice

40. The final sentence mainly means that reliable information ____.

- A. guarantees a high score B. is unnecessary after studying C. protects eligibility but cannot replace preparation D. makes professional courses optional
